

Fashion Designer Tracy Reese Honored Among 'Women of Inspiration' for Helping Children in Need

By Mia Goren June 8, 2017

The three honorees of Delivering Good's 2017 Women of Inspiration Luncheon are (l. to r.) Gayle Dean, Designer, Licensee Marketing at Target; Fashion Designer Tracy Reese; and Lana Todorovich, President, North American Wholesale, Rag & Bone.

"Don't wait for good things to happen to you. If you go out and make some good things happen, you will fill the world with hope. You will fill yourself with hope," said Karen Bromley as she quoted Barack Obama in her message to the audience at the Women of Inspiration luncheon on Wednesday in New York City. Bromley sits on the board of directors for Delivering Good, a charity fighting poverty through product, and she also serves as the luncheon's co-chair.

RELATED How Ralph Lauren's Turnaround Plan is Starting to Pay Off

A view of the inside of the Times Square Ballroom during the Women of Inspiration Luncheon. Courtesy of The Bromley Group-Delivering Good

Delivering Good, formerly K.I.D.S./Fashion Delivers, was founded more than 32 years ago.

Today, under its new name, the charity's mission of uniting retailers, manufacturers, foundations and individuals in an effort to collect brand new apparel, accessories, shoes, home furnishings, toys, books and other items to distribute to the poor and disadvantaged still stands. In her message from the committee, Bromley fought back tears as she explained that "the need never ends and sadly continues to grow. I know we can do so much more." However, it is the committee's overall gratitude for what has already been accomplished that shone through in Bromley's speech.

39 likes 0 comments
SHARE Every day the @DeliveringGood team works hard to #DeliverGood and bring smiles to the faces of children and families in need. #DeliveringGood #Hope #Donate #Children #Families #Poverty
APRIL 20

The organization has helped more than 500 community-based social service agencies through its programs, with many of them having been with the charity for more than 30 years.

More than 400 companies pitch in each year by donating brand new items to the disadvantaged. Since 1985, the company has donated more than $1.6 billion worth of product for its cause. Delivering Good's annual luncheon is time to award and honor women in the industry who have supported the organization and kept philanthropy at the forefront.

(l. to r.) Licensee for the Coach Purse, Bonnie Sage Dean, National Trade Shows Honoree Lana Todorovich, Licensee for the Kate Spade Bag and Delivering Good president & CEO Lisa Saravali. Courtesy of The Bromley Group-Delivering Good

This year's honorees included women leading some of fashion's biggest names.

Designer Tracy Reese was presented her award by fellow designer Stan Herman. Carole Postel, who also sits on the board of directors for Delivering Good, presented Gayle Dean, marketing director for licensing, Target, with her award. And honoree Lana Todorovich, president, North America wholesale, Rag & Bone, was presented by Emmie Todorovich, account executive, rag & bone.

Want more?

Is Jordan Brand Releasing a New 'Wings' Air Jordan for Charity?

David Beckham and Kate Moss Cross Pinkies for Louis Vuitton's Children's Charity Campaign

Louise Camuto Honored By K.I.D.S./Fashion Delivers

— Sign up for the FN Newsletter —

FN SPY, AWARDS, NORTH AMERICA, AWARDS, CHARITY, RALPH LAUREN, TRACY REESE

More From Footwear News

Recommended by Mutbrain

Kate Middleton Flaunts a Lot of Leg in Lace Dress and Purple Pumps
Mariana Trujillo Battles the Wind in Popcorn Short & Say High Nude Pumps
NPD Analyst Says Footwear Sales are in No Growth Mode

Featured Gallery

Celebrity Statement Shoes: August 2017

Around The Web

Latest Publication

Footwear News 06-04-2017

Read Now