Delivering Good Seeks Donations to Aid Harvey Victims

By CASEY CHORY

Published on August 29, 2017 in BAYOU, LA.

Delivering Good has been accepting the call of duty and distributing relief since 1990, supplying emergency supplies, clothing and personal care items to underserved and disaster-affected areas. The charity is again mobilizing its resources to assist the victims of Hurricane Harvey.

Trump Appears Ready to Quit South Korea Trade Agreement and Sourcing Could Pay the Price

By February 21, 2017 in South Korea

The White House and South Korean officials have been discussing the potential of a trade deal between the two countries. If a deal is signed, it could lead to higher tariffs on Chinese imports, which could have implications for the US manufacturing sector.

US Manufacturing and Spending Seen Ticking Up on Short-Term Hit from Hurricane Harvey's Impact

By August 21, 2017 in Manufacturing

The manufacturing sector is showing signs of recovery after the devastation caused by Hurricane Harvey. Despite the short-term impact, the sector is expected to remain robust in the long term.

The Week in Denim: H&M Steps Up Efforts to Eliminate Pollution in Turkey

By August 21, 2017 in Denim

H&M has announced plans to eliminate pollution in Turkey. The fast fashion retailer has set ambitious goals to reduce its environmental footprint and is working with local communities to achieve these targets.

Sluggish Apparel and Footwear Sector Continues to Lag Overall Consumer Spending

By August 21, 2017 in Apparel

The apparel and footwear sector continues to lag behind other sectors in consumer spending. Despite efforts to improve sales, the industry is still facing challenges in a competitive market.

Sourcing Scoop: Spencer Fung on Why the Role of the Agent Has Changed Beyond Recognition

By September 6, 2017 in Business Focus

Spencer Fung discusses the evolution of the role of the agent in the industry. He explores how technology and changing consumer behaviors are shaping the future of the agent.

Lululemon Looks to Hawaii to Improve Supply Chain Speed to Market

By August 21, 2017 in Retail

Lululemon has identified Hawaii as a key market for improving supply chain speed. The company is investing in local distribution centers to ensure faster delivery to customers in the region.

Report: New York’s Hudson River Dumps 300 Million Clothing Fibers Into the Ocean Daily

By September 6, 2017 in Environment

A new report reveals that the Hudson River is dumping 300 million clothing fibers into the ocean daily. This is causing concern among environmentalists and is raising questions about the impact on marine life.