

David Heath is the Co-Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Bombas, the comfort-focused apparel brand with a mission to help those in need. Bombas makes the most comfortable versions of the items we wear everyday - socks + slippers, underwear and t-shirts - and donates an item for every item they sell, as these are the most requested clothing items at homeless shelters. Under David's leadership over the last decade, the company has scaled to offer a wide range of high-quality products and has donated more than 100 million items to those experiencing homelessness across the country.

David has founded three companies, with one successful exit, and has invested and consulted on a range of start-up businesses from concept, through launch and continued growth. David holds a BA from Babson College with majors in Marketing, Management, and Entrepreneurship. He has been featured on ABC's Shark Tank, NBC TODAY Show, CBS This Morning, ABC Good Morning America, Bloomberg TV and in The New York Times.
