

MATTHEW FASCIANO

President + CEO

Delivering Good

Building on his extensive background in public service and mission-based leadership, in 2022, Matthew Fasciano assumed the role of President and Chief Executive Officer of Delivering Good, a national nonprofit that unites retailers, manufacturers, foundations, and individuals to provide people impacted by poverty and tragedy with new merchandise, effectively distributed through a network of community partners to offer hope, dignity, and self-esteem to at-risk children, families, and individuals. Responsible for overseeing all facets of the organization, Matthew drives the mission, fundraising, operations, and engagement with the board of directors.

In his previous role as the Chief Operating Officer of The Posse Foundation, Matthew oversaw the national operation and special program initiatives for this college success, youth development organization. He worked closely with Posse's board and president on key strategic initiatives to ensure organizational success as the organization more than doubled in size under his leadership.

Prior to Posse, Matthew worked for the New York City Department of Juvenile Justice first as Director of Operations and then as the department's Deputy General Counsel. He advised executive staff on issues of law and policy and represented the agency in court and before oversight entities. Matthew has served on city and statewide advisory councils for alcoholism/substance abuse, domestic violence, and juvenile justice matters, and represented DJJ in alternative-to-detention and discharge planning/re-entry forums. He began his career as a teacher and Dean of Students with the New York City Department of Education and then practiced clinical social work for Counseling Service EDNY, The Children's Aid Society and Safe Horizon. He has organized social justice initiatives for at-risk youth and youth from newer immigrant communities for NYC Council and served as a legislative and policy analyst for the Queens County District

Attorney's Office. His work on school violence, substance abuse and domestic violence has been recognized by the statewide District Attorney's Association.

Matthew received a BA in Sociology, an MSW from New York University, and a JD from St. John's University School of Law. He is admitted to practice law in New York and Connecticut. He is an active disaster responder with the Red Cross in Westchester County and a founding member of the Rye, NY chapter of Sleep in Heavenly Peace, an organization that builds bunkbeds for kids in need.
